Dubai Protective Systems (DPS) which operates under Dubai Police has been rebranded as Security Industry Regulatory Agency (SIRA). Focused on the idea 'Security is everyone's responsibility', SIRA directs the service providers in installation and maintenance services, and how to improve the services provided to customers. As the use of security equipment plays an important role on the reduction of crimes, The Dubai Police and security officials consider the views of security providing companies on the quality of CCTV systems and the importance of the usage and proper and safe maintenance of security equipment. The officials also take into consideration the opinions of system installation companies prior to implement laws on the security standards they aim to execute in Dubai.

Technicians and engineers employed in field of security system installation and maintenance have to complete the course set up by SIRA and acquire CCTV Engineer or Technician ID card approved by SIRA.

This year onwards, Video Guard, the advanced Security equipment that have been mandated in special fields resulted in improved security environment. Dubai Police has instructed SIRA approved companies to install Video Guard in institutions like banks, jewelries, commercial services, mobile sim card related outlets and financial services.

Security officials can ensure and determine all the operations of the security equipment in institutions that have installed Video Guard. The main feature of Video Guard is to notify customers and service providing companies about maintenance of security equipment.
